The Student Council Association's purpose of establishing better understanding and more co-operation between students and faculty was partly filled by this year's activities and services. We sponsored assemblies, a Christmas party, citizens-of-the-month, a Christmas door decoration contest, a spring clean-up, and the Lohr-Lunsford award. The SCA also supported the Monogram Club and library by giving money to their treasuries.

How do you get folks to vote for Joe Malcolm?

Quick! Let's get the loot before Super Treasurer finds it.

Sponsors were Mrs. Sally Samples and Mrs. Bebe Hiner.

The overall goal of the club is to help individuals improve personal, family, and community living now and in the future.

F U T U R E F A R M E R S

The Highland Chapter of Future Farmers of America is quite an industrious organization. With the number of girls joining the organization, the membership increased to 134 this year. Again this year the money-making project was selling citrus fruit. The earnings were used for the annual FFA banquet, prizes for hunters and fishermen. Many members of the club showed their livestock in the county fair as a project. Officers were Lowell Simmons, Donald Hedrick, Bobby Beverage, Junior Altizer, Bill Puffenbarger, and Mike W. Armstrong. The organization was under the leadership of Mr. Winfree Gutshall and Mr. John Moyers this year.

PEOPLE

The Senior Class was involved in many money-making projects. These activities included a dance, candy sales, a bake sale, alumni-senior ball game, Maple Festival trout fry and bazaar, and a three-act play. All of these things helped to finance their senior trip to New York City and Philadelphia plus graduation expenses.

Because of their large size, they graduated as the largest class of Highland High.

Our sponsors were: Mrs. Samples, Ms. Hockman, and Ms. Hass. The officers were: Donna Obaugh, Eldon Galford, Judy Waggoner, Kay Gwin, Bill Puffenbarger, Terry Halterman, Ronnie Botkin

"CHOICE" played for the special event

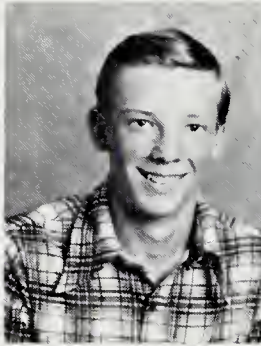

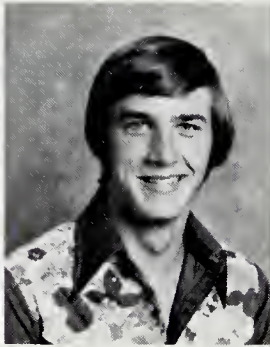

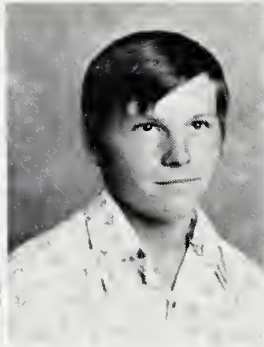

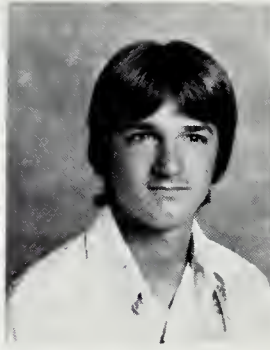

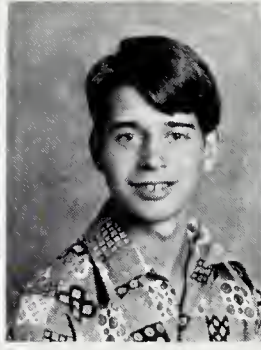

Everyone including the teachers were enjoying dancing.

The Junior class consisting of 29 students is small but mighty. With the help of their sponsors; Mr. Carrier, Mrs. Hiner, and Mr. Warner, their parents, and especially their class secretary — Joyce Newlen they have succeeded to bring about changes other classes were unsuccessful in doing!

To make money for the Junior trip to the Williamsburg, Jamestown, Norfolk area, and to give the Seniors a Prom worth remembering, they presented a play "Hillbilly Weddin", served the Mason's, held a raffle, sponsored a dance, and with the Seniors jointly held a bazaar and served dinners during the Maple Festival.

The class officers were: Roberta Lambert, Susan Kincaid, Joyce Newlen, Paul Anderson, Greg Hogshead, Linda Swadley, and Terry Neil.

In Scenic Highland
County, the Heart of the Alleghany Mountains

Henry David Thoreau was wrong.

We can have wood. And the woods, too.

Back in the 1850's, naturalist Henry David Thoreau predicted that Maine would become a tree-less wasteland.

But he underestimated the ability of man and nature working together to renew the forest.

Today, Maine has the greatest percentage of forestland of any state in the Union.

Which proves that, with man and nature working together, our forests can last forever—and can be logged forever.

One example:

The Robert H. Gardiner forestland in Maine. Owned by the same family since 1754, it has yielded four timber harvests for generations since then. Yet, it still provides the wildlife habitat, watershed protection, recreation and the scenic splendor Thoreau talked about. We call it sharing the land through multiple use.

Another example: Much of the Great Southern forest that some said was "gone forever" back in the 1920's has been harvested at least once since.

Today, the Southern forest supplies about 50% of the pulp, 40% of the plywood and 30% of the lumber made in the U.S.

That's what good forest management is all about. The forest industry has already shown that it can produce twice as much wood fiber per acre as public lands.

That means developing superior tree strains, thinning, fertilizing, and harvesting like any good farmer.

It also means the same forest is providing recreation, wildlife habitat, scenic beauty, watershed protection and timber harvest.

Industry forestlands are already working double time. All landowners must do the same if we're going to meet the next generation's voracious demand for wood. (The U.S. Forest Service has said we're going to need nearly twice as much wood in 25 years.)

We can do it. If federal and state forestry agencies adequately manage 136 million acres of publicly-owned commercial forest.*

And if the four million private individuals—farmers and others who own 59% of the nation's commercial woodlands—manage their lands for increased timber productivity as well as recreation and wildlife.

We can have our wood. And our woods, too. If we act now.

Trees. The renewable resource.

Westvaco

Commercial forest is described as that portion of the total forest which is capable and available for growing trees for harvest. Parks, Wilderness and Primitive Areas are not included.*
